Support from your council

Your council has a duty to provide the following financial assistance once you turn 18:

Leaving Care Grant (setting up home allowance) To furnish your accommodation. Government guidance says at least £2,000.

16-19 Bursary Aged 16-19? In education? You should receive £1,200 each academic year from your college.

Higher Education Bursary In higher education? You're entitled to £2,000, usually paid in instalments over the duration of your course.

Vacation accommodation for higher education You should either get somewhere to live or help paying your rent.

Assistance with costs for education, employment and training All councils should have a financial policy for care leavers and your pathway plan should highlight the support you need. For example, money towards driving lessons.

Benefits (help with living costs, from the government)

Lots of factors affect which benefits you can apply for and the amount you'll receive. Benefit calculators are a handy way to work out what you're entitled to! Try turn2us.org.uk and entitledto.co.uk.

You don't have to tell the job centre you're a care leaver, but if you do, they should provide extra support.

The three most common benefits for single young people are:

- Jobseeker's Allowance If aged 18-24, not in full-time education, actively seeking/available for work or working under 16 hours per week, you could receive £57.90 per week*.
- Income support If aged 16-19, in full-time education and either a parent, not living with a parent, or a refugee, you could receive £57.90 (£73.10 if you're a parent). Care leavers can continue to receive income support until age 22 if your claim started before you turned 21 and you're still in education.

- Housing benefit If you live away from family, have a low income and less than £16,000 in savings, you can get help with your rent. People who cannot claim include EU jobseekers, asylum seekers without leave to remain and full-time students (unless you have children). Different rates apply depending on where you live. Care leavers eligible for housing benefit should be entitled to the full one-bedroom rate up to age 22.

By 2017, Universal Credit will replace some individual benefits with a single payment that considers all your financial needs.

If you're receiving benefits and need extra help, you can apply for a budgeting loan. It's interest-free, but repayments come out of your benefits. More info: gov.uk/budgeting-loans.
